The Genesis of a Golfing Genius

Tom Doak's love for golf began at a tender age, spending countless hours honing his skills on the fairways. Inspired by the classic courses of Scotland and his passion for history, he embarked on a path to design courses that would challenge and delight golfers of all levels.

Doak's early work, such as the Dunes Club in Michigan and Pacific Dunes in Oregon, showcased his ability to craft courses that seamlessly blended with the natural surroundings. He meticulously studied the terrain, wind patterns, and local flora to ensure that each hole played in harmony with its environment.

The Principles of Doak's Designs

At the heart of Doak's philosophy lies the notion that golf courses should be both playable and enjoyable. He rejects the concept of penalizing golfers for straying from the fairway, instead embracing forgiveness and encouraging creativity.
