Breaking Down the Scene Rubric

Purpose

The Scene Rubric begins by examining the purpose of a scene. What does the writer want to achieve with this scene? Is it to advance the plot, reveal character, create atmosphere, or evoke emotion? Understanding the purpose provides a clear foundation for evaluating the scene's effectiveness.

Execution

The Rubric then assesses the execution of the scene. This includes evaluating the dialogue, action, setting, and pacing. Are the characters believable and well-developed? Does the action flow smoothly and keep readers engaged? Is the setting vivid and sensory? Is the pacing appropriate for the story's rhythm?

Impact

Finally, the Rubric considers the impact of the scene. Did the scene achieve its intended purpose? How did it contribute to the overall story arc? Did it leave a lasting impression on the reader? Evaluating the impact helps writers understand the effectiveness of their scene and identify areas where they can enhance its emotional resonance.
